

Ben Haneman Memorial Student Prize

The ANZSHM established this Prize in honour of its late President, Dr Ben Haneman. The Prize is for students as Ben Haneman passionately wished to encourage the next generation of researchers in the history of medicine. It is awarded for the best paper submitted by a postgraduate student at an ANZSHM conference.

The Prize is a book token or cheque for $100 plus a year's ANZSHM membership. Judges will be a panel of three appointed by the Society's Executive. If the quality of entries warrants, there will be a shortlist of finalists. Each finalist who does not win the Prize will be awarded one year's membership of the ANZSHM. It is anticipated that normally there will be three finalists, along with the Prize winner. However, as necessary, the judges may decide not to award the Prize and their decision is final.

Eligible students may be full or part time and must provide evidence of their student status. Post-doctoral students are excluded. Papers eligible for the Prize must be solely authored by the student and based on the student's research. Any subsequent publications from the paper (in, for example, Health & History) may be dual-authored.

The deadline for submission of papers will normally be during the conference, with the winner notified approximately a month later. The results will be announced in the Medical History Newsletter and on the ANZSHM website. More details on the requirements for the Prize will be available from each convener of an ANZSHM biennial conference and advertised both on this website and on the relevant conference website.
